

CONNECTING KIDS TO NATURE

with

Tepee Ted of the Traveling Wilderness Museum

February 20-22, 10 am - 12 pm

Connect your children with fun filled days of learning how Native children, of long ago, learned the skills and knowledge necessary to live comfortable lives in the wilderness. Taking place inside the Stony Brook Village Center's Educational and Cultural Center, students will be introduced to the bows and arrow, as well as the role story-telling played in Native American experience. Hands-on activities include touching deer skins and bones and learning the ways items of daily use were made. Indian drums, games and jewelry from, wood, shells and beads complete the adventure.

Cost: $90.00 for all 3 days (Per day pricing: $35.00 pp)
